CONSENT FOR PARTICIPATION IN RESEARCH PROTOCOL

This is a study being conducted at the Department of Psychology at the University of Chicago. We are conducting a study that will look at attitudes on social and political issues.

This research is being done as part of a collaboration within the Department of Psychology at the University of Chicago. We will test approximately 600 individuals and may use this information in published articles or presented at academic presentations but no information regarding your identity or your involvement as a research subject will be published or revealed. Information collected during this study will be retained by this laboratory and may be used in future research projects, but this information will not be linked to you in any way.

Participation is on a purely voluntary basis. Your participation in this study does not involve any physical risk or emotional risk to you beyond the risks of daily life. You will be asked to read some short passages and then indicate your attitudes on the issues discussed. You will also be asked to complete several surveys and questionnaire batteries. Compensation will be $7 for each hour of participation. The study is expected to last 1 hour. The results from this study may be published or presented, but no information regarding your identity or involvement as a research subject will be published or revealed. Your involvement in this experiment may benefit the field of psychology by helping to advance theories on attitudes and cognitive processing.

Your involvement in this study is appreciated, but you may leave the experiment at any time without receiving any penalty or prejudice. If, at any point, you decide to withdraw your consent, you will be paid the entire amount for all sessions (or partial sessions) that you have completed.

Please sign below if you understand the above information and voluntarily consent to participate in this experiment.
