

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN DEVELOPMENT
Principal Investigator: Joe Smith

Child Assent Script

We are asking you to participate in a study looking at how children think about and remember different things. We'd like to show you a short cartoon video and then afterwards we'd like to show you some pictures of different objects and have you tell us if you saw them in the cartoon or not. It should only take 10-15 minutes, but we can stop anytime you want to stop.

Your parents know that we're here doing this task to you and your classmates, but you can decide whether you want to watch the cartoon or not.

There's nothing to worry about with the cartoon or the questions we'll ask you afterwards. Although we're in school, this is not a test and you will not be graded on anything you do for us. Most children who do this study with us think that it's fun. And, all students in the class will be getting some stickers as a thank you for helping us, even if they don't want to do the video task with us.

Do you think you'd like to watch the cartoon and answer some questions about it for us?